Exchange languages: Spanish-Spanish or Spanish-English

Semester: Spring/Summer 2022

Faculty: Jennifer Brady, Department Head and Associate Professor of Spanish Studies

A faculty member of the University of Minnesota is seeking a partner from Spain whose coursework involves project-based learning and is related to contemporary social topics. Topics may include the commons, the social economy, innovative social models for communities, and creative resistance. The ideal partner would have students who would be willing to speak Spanish to discuss the aftermath of the 15-m movement, municipality movements, creative solutions to complex social issues, regeneration of spaces (e.g., community centers, shared work offices, museums, artistic complexes), and the relationship of the government and grassroots movements.
